Elementary Dental Health Education

This New Children's Dental Health Program has been designed for use in the classroom to help teacher's explain the often mysterious world of dentistry to their students. The classroom can serve as an immediate pathway to happy, healthy smiles for children who may have never visited a dental office before. The teaching exercises will give children positive, friendly images of a dental office, while explaining the range of emotions they may feel. Using these methods, educators will be able to allay any fears or misconceptions held by children who may need dental care the most.

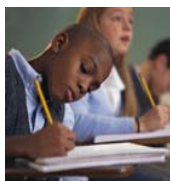

Teaching Children's Dental Health in a class room setting

REMOVE DENTAL FEARS BY IMPOWERING THE CHILDREN

After Implementing our guide, teachers will find their students to be excited about their own dental care. This learning can bring a new confidence to the children that can stay with them for a lifetime.

TESTIMONIALS

"This is a uniquely crafted program that is understandable and informative, while inviting the student to participate actively in the Learning process. The teaching techniques presented should easily stimulate children's thoughts about this vital area of health and simultaneously facilitate the educator's job."

Writing exercises are incorporated as part of their learning

"As all children may not have equal opportunity to learn the lessons about oral health in the home environment, Judith and Carol have given public and private school teacher's the resources to motivate and empower children in the class room setting. It is

Reaching children within our own school system complete, interactive, and easy to integrate into existing educational curricula. I applaud them for taking this giant leap to help ensure the oral and total health of our nation's children, one of our most precious natural resources!"
